20 August 2018 is the deadline to receive your applications

Call for 15 artists, young activists, creative and restless people

Call for participants and programme

An International team of specialists in Comics and sequential art will lead a 5 days Comics Workshop, in order to create and publish a comic-book collection of short visual stories made by the participants. Our facilitators, Yorgos Konstantinou (Barcelona based Greek visual engineer, graduate in Visual Communication at the Berlin Arts University) and Melandros Ganas (Cyprus-based Greek comics scholar, independent-comics editor and award-winning scriptwriter), both with a long experience in creating, editing and teaching comics, have developed a methodology based on a series of innovative learning tools.

“We want to provide you the tools you need for visually expressing your views and opinions in a comic form and learn how to publish your own comic book”. Our subject is “social justice”, open to be interpreted and amplified in a group process. During the workshop, the personal needs of each participant will be attended individually. According to demand, participants can get an introduction to digital processes, drawing techniques, storytelling tools, etc. The workshop will be held in 5 sessions, combining theoretical knowledge on comics’ creation, experimental and playful didactic activities, practical exercises and a focus on storytelling techniques that all together can help the participants create their own personal comic stories.
